

European Permaculture Convergence 2027

From 4–7 March 2027, permaculturists from across Europe will come together online for four days of inspiration, practical knowledge, conversations and connection for the European Permaculture Convergence.

Our keynote speakers will be Looby Macnamara, bringing her work in People & Permaculture, and David Holmgren, sharing his thinking and experience, including his work around RetroSuburbia. Both will be part of a pre-recorded interview session. As a EuPN-member you can submit your questions via our forum.

The heart of the convergence is you.

You might offer a workshop, share a project, introduce a useful tool, facilitate a conversation, explore a question, tell a story from your practice, or bring something you've been experimenting with.

It could be a deep dive into soil, social permaculture, food systems or natural building. It could be a conversation about livelihoods, activism, community, education or regenerative culture. Or it could be something wonderfully unexpected that nobody thought to put in a convergence programme.

Bring your experience, your questions. Bring what you have learned the hard way. Bring a practice that works. And if you don't have a session to propose, come anyway. Your curiosity, your questions and your vote help shape the gathering.

Come and see what we can create together!
